The fallout from the Ashes continues as the behaviour of certain England players on tour in NZ and Australia comes to light.

Without going into exact details, if Aussie players behaved in such a way I'd be extremely angry and disappointed. By all means go have a beer and relax but don't go over the top.

The Harry Brook cover up has now been exposed and for someone who was England ODI captain, it's well below the behaviour expected. There are a few other lads in their camp who have behaved badly, and if it all does come to light it may be the final straw for the ECB with the coach and others in charge sent packing. People in the media all know, it may be just a matter of time before it all comes out.

The BBL is rapidly coming to an end and the Strikers campaign has been largely disappointing. The only real shining lights have been Liam Scott with the bat and Lloyd Pope with his leggies. The batting has not fired at all, while the bowling at times has been wayward and inconsistent. Team selection has been baffling at times, while Jason Sangha, Mac Harvey and Harry Manenti have all hardly made a run. Tactically just fielding every time when winning the toss is a mindless and lazy strategy.

Perth's firepower with the bat in making 200 five times, has shown that batting first can be the way to go, and then back your bowlers.

I reckon they'll win it, and continue to be the template of how to win BBL titles.
